5:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

Free!

Remarkable artists (writers, composers and visual artists) from around the country and the world present their work at HOH completed during their stay at Columbia County's Millay Colony. A reception with the artists follows each monthly event.

The Millay Colony for the Arts was founded in 1973 to honor the courageous life and work of Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Edna St. Vincent Millay. The Colony offers one-month residencies to writers, visual artists and composers on the property the poet called home for more than thirty years in Austerlitz, New York. Our singular goal is to create a nurturing and inspiring space outside the pressures of daily life where artists can commit themselves fully to their work. Supporting the work of artists of all ages, cultures, communities, and in all stages of their artistic careers, the Colony offers comfortable rooms, private studios and ample time to work.
